UK Thermography Association

UKTA is a group of thermographers who have come together with the common goal of furthering all aspects of thermography. UKTA's mission is as follows:

"UKTA is a professional association dedicated to excellence in all infrared imaging applications, supporting, promoting and expanding infrared imaging and measurement.

It is formed to network individuals, organizations and associations in the thermography profession in the UK and the rest of the world. UKTA will form alliances with other associations of similar objective in other countries"

UK Thermography Association Medical Section

The UKTA Medical Section exists to promote and develop medical infrared thermography in the UK. Membership is open to all who use thermography in a medical context, or who simply have an interest in the application of infrared imaging in medicine.

The UKTA Medical Section is affiliated to the European Association of Thermology (EAT). For 2012, Medical Section members receive four issues of "Thermology International", the journal of medical thermography and temperature measurement, free of charge.

The UKTA Medical Section will organize regular medical infrared meetings in the UK, and keep members informed about conferences abroad.

To join us, please complete the membership registration form and send it to the address below. To enable your copies of the journal to be sent out, on joining please also contact Kevin Howell, chair of the Medical Section at khowell@medsch.ucl.ac.uk Tel: 020 7472 6550
